WHO YOU ARE

Everything in this blueprint is built around who you are as an artist and who your fans are as people. Before strategy comes identity.

AESTHETIC

Dark. Cinematic. Luminous. Intentional.

COLORS

Deep Black · Electric Gold · Midnight Blue

VISUAL REFERENCES

Blade Runner 2049 · Roger Deakins · Daft Punk Live Visuals

YOUR ICON

A single gold light burning against total darkness — the one thing worth moving toward.

HOW YOU SHOW UP

Minimal, deliberate, and always focused on the feeling over the face. Your presence is implied, not declared.

INSTAGRAM FIRST IMPRESSION

"This person lives in a different world — and I want in."

THE DRIFTERS — YOUR FANBASE

Your core fan is around 25, spends weekends at festivals or driving at night with no destination in mind. They wear minimal streetwear, ask deep questions, and treat music less like entertainment and more like a lifeline. They've chosen feeling over comfort more than once.

THEY WANT TO BECOME

They want to become the version of themselves that said yes to the real life — traveling freely, doing work that matters, surrounded by people who haven't stopped dreaming. They want proof that choosing freedom over routine was the right call.

THEY FIGHT AGAINST

Corporate culture and the slow death of settling. The routine. People who stopped dreaming and started justifying it.

IF SOMEONE CRITICIZED YOUR MUSIC

You just don't feel it yet. This isn't background music — it takes you somewhere. Give it one real listen.

WHERE YOU STAND

You're an independent melodic techno artist sitting at 12K TikTok, 8.5K Instagram, and 2.2K YouTube — with 7 releases and one track that hit 2M streams organically, no paid promotion. That number matters. It means the music works without a machine behind it. Right now the gap isn't talent or sound — it's content volume and visual consistency.

WHAT'S WORKING

Your music already converts without paid support — 2M organic streams on a single track proves the sound resonates deeply. The BTS studio content also showed that your audience responds when they feel like insiders discovering something early.

WHAT'S HOLDING YOU BACK

Content volume is the ceiling right now. The music is label-worthy but your digital presence doesn't yet reflect the scale of what you're building — labels and partners look at consistency, not just peaks.

THE REAL GAP

You have proof of concept with 2M streams and zero budget behind it. The next 12 months aren't about making better music — they're about building a content engine that makes the music impossible to ignore.

THE RULES OF THE GAME

The artists who blow up aren't the most talented. They're the ones who play by different rules.

RULE 01

Volume beats perfection.

Every video is a lottery ticket. Post even when you're not sure — the algorithm has different taste than you. The more tickets, the faster things pop.

RULE 02

Instagram Trials is your most powerful lever.

Activate Trials on every Reel at publication. Minimum 3 days before publishing to your audience. Shows your content to non-followers first — for free. Most artists never use this.

RULE 03

When a video blows up — reuse its audio for 7 days.

The algorithm has found your audience. It keeps pushing content to people who already reacted to that sound. Ride the wave immediately.

RULE 04

Shares are the most powerful signal.

A share means someone connected enough to send it to another person. End CTA should always push for a share — "send this to a friend that loves melodic techno."

RULE 05

Never delete an underperforming video.

Deleting resets the algorithm's understanding of your page. Leave everything up — a slow video can get picked up weeks later.

RULE 06

Reply to comments in the first hour.

The algorithm reads activity as a quality signal. A burst of comment activity in the first 60 minutes tells the platform this content is worth pushing further.

YOUR 6 VIDEO CONCEPTS

These formats are adapted to your universe — dark, cinematic, no talking head required. Use them as your rotating content pillars.

01 The Drop Is Coming — BTS Build

Film the exact moment in the studio when the drop locks in — unfiltered, no talking, just the sound building and your reaction. This is your highest-performing format because it makes the viewer feel like they're hearing it before the world does. The 2M organic track worked for the same reason.

→ "you can hear the moment it becomes something. track dropping soon."

02 Gold Light, No Context

A 10-15 second ambient visual — a single gold light source in a dark environment, your music underneath, no text, no explanation. It trains the algorithm and your audience to recognize your visual language instantly. Consistency builds iconography.

→ "somewhere between midnight and everything changing."

03 The Moment Before — Fan Mirror

Post a black screen with a single line of text — 'what were you doing the first time this hit different?' — with your track underneath. This turns The Drifters into participants. Their comments become your social proof and feed the algorithm with engagement.

→ "this one was made for the moment before everything changes. tell me where you were."

04 Festival Night POV — No Face

Raw POV footage from a festival or night drive — windows down, city lights or crowd lights blurring, your unreleased music playing. No talking. No face. Pure feeling. This speaks directly to your 25-year-old fan driving at night and positions you as the soundtrack to their actual life.

→ "this is what it's for. new music incoming."

05 Track Breakdown — One Feeling, One Element

Not a tutorial. A 20-second clip isolating one layer of a track — the pad, the melody, the high-hat pattern — with a single sentence about the emotion you were chasing. No talking head, just the screen and the sound. This satisfies producers and pure listeners simultaneously.

→ "built this whole thing around one feeling. you'll know it when it hits."

06 The Cinematic Trailer — Single Rollout

A 30-45 second cinematic pre-release clip shot with your videographer — deep black environment, electric gold practical light, slow camera movement, no lyrics, no title cards until the final frame. Modeled directly on Blade Runner 2049 visual language and Daft Punk release aesthetics. This is your label-facing content — it shows vision, not just music.

→ "something's been building. almost ready."

SPLIT TEST & AUDIO STRATEGY

One video is never just one video. Every variable is a new ticket. The same footage can be reused multiple times — different caption, hook cut earlier, overlay added or removed.

| VARIABLE              | WHAT YOU TEST                                                                                                                              | IMPACT                        |
|-----------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| Hook Timing           | Test dropping the most euphoric 3 seconds of the track as the very first frame versus a slow cinematic build open.                         | Watch time, save rate         |
| Caption Length        | Test one-line poetic captions versus zero-caption posts with pure visual and audio to see which drives more profile visits.                | Profile visits, follows       |
| Posting Time          | Test posting at 10pm local time versus 7am to identify when The Drifters are most active and emotional.                                    | Reach, engagement rate        |
| Face vs. No Face      | Test a single silhouette or obscured-face clip versus your current no-face standard to measure if any personal presence increases saves.   | Saves, shares                 |
| Release Teaser Length | Test a 10-second teaser clip versus a 45-second cinematic trailer for the same upcoming track.                                             | Pre-save clicks, story shares |
| Music Entry Point     | Test starting videos at the drop versus starting at the emotional breakdown to identify which moment converts cold viewers into followers. | Follower conversion rate      |

HASHTAG STRATEGY

Cap every post at 5 hashtags maximum to avoid looking algorithmic. Your core stack: #melodict techno anchors your genre identity and has an active discovery community. #melodichouse captures crossover listeners following artists like Lane 8 and Tomas Grey. #undergroundelectronic reaches the anti-mainstream crowd that mirrors The Drifters' identity. #festivalseason used on night POV and live content connects you to real-world moments. #electronicmusic as your broadest reach tag, used sparingly on cinematic trailer content only. Rotate combinations — never use all five on every post.

END CTA — ALWAYS

Add a CTA in the last 5 seconds. Always push for the share — "Send this to a friend that loves melodic techno." Shares compound. Likes don't.

VIDEO RETENTION CURVES

Your Instagram analytics show how people watch your videos. These 4 curves tell you exactly what to fix — and what to keep doing.

GOOD VIDEO ✓

Gradual drop, stays above 50%. The algorithm reads this as quality content and keeps pushing it. More reach, more discovery.

BAD VIDEO ✗

Drops to zero in the first 3 seconds. The hook isn't working. Fix: cut the opening, start at the best moment, or change the visual entry point.

BAD MOMENTUM ✗

Steady decline throughout. The video starts okay but loses the viewer mid-way. Fix: shorten the video, cut dead time, or add a second hook at the halfway point.

BAD EXPLANATION ✗

Cliff drop at a specific point. Something in the middle kills it — a caption that disappears, a transition, a slow section. Pinpoint exactly where the drop happens and cut that moment.

YOUR CAPTION BANK

Every caption here is written for The Drifters — built around your sound, your world, and the feeling your music creates. Test at least 2 styles on every clip.

STYLE 1 — THE DRIFTER

somewhere between leaving and arriving.

made this for the version of you that chose the real life.

windows down. city behind you. this one's for that.

the moment before everything changes has a sound now.

built for people who drive with no destination and mean it.

you don't listen to this. you remember something with it.

still making music for the people who haven't stopped moving.

this is what it sounds like when you finally choose yourself.

STYLE 2 — THE SIGNAL

new track incoming. nothing else to say.

been building this one for months. almost.

drop incoming. you'll know when it's ready.

studio at 2am. this is where it happens.

the feeling is locked in. just finishing the details.

something's been building since last year. soon.

this one starts quiet. it doesn't stay that way.

seven tracks in. this is the one that changes things.

STYLE 3 — THE FEELING FIRST

euphoric. nostalgic. free. that's the whole brief.

if it doesn't feel like something, it doesn't leave the studio.

every track starts with an emotion. this one started with freedom.

not chasing energy. chasing the feeling energy leaves behind.

some music fills a room. this one was made to fill a moment.

the drop is nothing without what comes before it.

made for the people who feel music before they understand it.

this isn't background music. it was never supposed to be.

STYLE 4 — THE QUIET STATEMENT

VIBRAL STUDIO

2M streams. zero paid. the music did that.

independent. intentional. not going anywhere.

BUILD YOUR UNIVERSE

Viral content brings views. Branding creates real fans — people who come to your shows, buy your merch, and want to be part of your community. That's the difference between a view spike and a career.

YOUR BRANDING BIBLE — ONE PAGE

COLORS

Deep black as the dominant base on all content — backgrounds, clothing, set design. Electric gold used sparingly as the single point of contrast, never decorative, always intentional — a light source, a detail, never a pattern. Midnight blue appears as a color wash or grade in video content to add depth without warmth. Never use white, bright red, or saturated greens. The palette should feel like a city at 2am, not a festival poster.

VISUAL REFERENCES

Roger Deakins and Blade Runner 2049 define your lighting logic — practical sources, deep shadow, minimal fill. Use this as a brief for your videographer: one light, one subject, total darkness around it. Daft Punk live visuals inform your performance and release content — spectacle through restraint, not excess. Off-White gives you fashion and layout direction: minimal, architectural, intentional negative space. When in doubt — would this frame work as a still photograph? If yes, shoot it.

CAPTION TONE

Write like someone who thinks before they speak. Short sentences. No exclamation marks. No emoji unless used as punctuation, never as decoration. Avoid explaining the music — describe the feeling or the moment it belongs to. Never hype your own releases with words like 'banger' or 'fire.' The music is serious. The captions are too.

YOUR SYMBOL

A single gold light in the dark — this is your recurring visual anchor across all content. It appears as a practical light source in shoots, a color grade decision in videos, and the conceptual logic behind every piece of content you make. The Drifters are moving toward something — your light is what they're moving toward. Make it appear consistently enough that your audience recognizes it before they read your name.
